What is Stainless Steel?

Stainless steel is a durable and affordable metal that is used for a wide variety of purposes. It's strong, making it perfect for flatware and it's corrosion resistant, so it can last a long time without being replaced.

Chromium

Chromium is an essential element used in stainless steel for its durability and rust/stain resistant properties.

Nickel

Nickel is an element added to bring strength to the flatware as well as a soft luster similar to silver, producing a bright and polished look and also gives added resistance to corrosion.

18/10 Stainless Steel (304 Stainless)

Contains 18% chromium and 10% nickel. 18/10 is the highest quality stainless steel. This stainless is non-magnetic therefore it will not work in flatware retrievers.

18/8 Stainless Steel (304 Stainless)

Contains 18% chromium and 8% nickel. This stainless is non-magnetic, therefore, it will not work in flatware retrievers.

18/0 Stainless Steel (420 Stainless)

Contains 18% chromium and 0% nickel. 18/0 has an economic value which is usually seen at casual and high volume restaurants.

13/0 Stainless Steel (410 Stainless)

Contains 13% chromium and 0% nickel. This steel is used to make knives due to the softer properties.

Medium Weight

Medium weight flatware are patterns that are more economical and tend to be trendy and transitional. These patterns are ideal in casual, high-paced establishments as well as mid-level restaurants.

Heavy Weight

Heavy weight flatware are upscale patterns that can be found in high-end restaurants, upscale casual and fine dining and in hotels. They tend to be more modern in design.
